Aortic Pathologies: Aneurysm, Atherosclerosis and More

Message from the Guest Editors

Many well-known and experienced vascular surgeons from across the world have contributed their original manuscripts to this Special Issue, addressing relevant, contemporary, and popular problems associated with aortic pathologies in the fields of thoracoabdominal (TAAA) aortic aneurysm, abdominal aortic aneurysm (AAA) and other pathologies, such as the rare case of coral reef aorta (CRA), severe and clinically relevant atherosclerosis of the juxta- and infrarenal aorta. In this Special Issue, the reader will obtain new insights regarding the outcomes of open TAAA repair, focusing on pre-operative cardiovascular fitness, the clinical value of biomarkers assessing postoperative organ failure after open TAAA repair, and the outcome of the operative and conservative treatment of coral reef aorta, among many more topics. We hope that our collection of manuscripts will inform daily practice and may help with treating patients suffering from aortic pathologies.
