Clinical Updates on Perioperative Pain Management

Message from the Guest Editors

Pain is always a personal experience that is influenced to varying degrees by biological, psychological, and social factors. Optimal perioperative pain management positively impacts on the quality of patients' recovery, reducing the incidence of complications. For this reason, multimodal approaches including regional anesthesia techniques, analgesics drugs, and rehabilitation programs play a key role in the field of research with the aim to improve perioperative analgesia. For this Special Issue, we welcome original high-quality works about the use of innovative regional anesthesia techniques including neuraxial blocks, peripheral nerve blocks, and fascial plane blocks to treat perioperative pain. Moreover, papers investigating the use of specific drugs, rehabilitation protocols, or innovative devices to manage perioperative analgesia will also be considered. Accepted manuscripts may be in the form of research papers, case reports, original studies, laboratory investigations, or reviews.
