Pain Management: Current Challenges and Future Prospects

Message from the Guest Editor

Chronic pain is a complex and widespread phenomenon that occurs in the general population at a prevalence of 20%. Chronic pain causes a reduction in the quality of life, which is associated with increased morbidity and high costs for the healthcare system. Every day, clinicians face great challenges related to chronic pain; these relate to topics ranging from invasive and minimally invasive techniques to regenerative medicine. The aim of this Special Issue is to summarize the most recent evidence relating to pain medicine, with a focus on the radio frequency ablation of the articular branches to the large joints, as well as on the role of autologous regenerative therapy in chronic pain. Research articles, reviews, technical communications, and case reports are welcome.
