Clinical Advances in Cancer Imaging

Message from the Guest Editor

The role of imaging in cancer diagnosis and treatment has expanded significantly in recent years, particularly within the field of pelvic oncology. This Special Issue welcomes original research articles and reviews that explore recent innovations in CT and MRI applications for pelvic malignancies, including gynecologic, rectal, and bladder cancers. We are especially interested in studies focusing on emerging morphological imaging criteria for diagnosis, staging, prognosis, and treatment response assessment. Submissions that integrate artificial intelligence—such as texture analysis and radiomics—into clinical workflows to enhance precision and predictive accuracy are also highly encouraged. We welcome contributions that emphasize the translational potential of novel imaging tools, whether through advanced acquisition techniques, quantitative imaging features, or AI-driven decision support systems. Our goal is for this Special Issue to promote interdisciplinary collaboration and serve as a platform for sharing impactful clinical advances in oncologic imaging that improve patient care and outcomes. About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

There has been an explosion of gene and target based research and therapeutics in the multitude of fields that compose clinical medicine. The Journal of Clinical Medicine's (JCM) staff and editorial board are dedicated to providing cutting edge, timely, and peer-reviewed articles covering the diverse subspecialties of clinical medicine. The journal publishes concise, innovative, and exciting research articles as well as clinically significant articles and reviews that are pertinent to the myriad of disciplines within medicine. The articles published are relevant to both primary care physicians and specialists. The journal's full-texts are archived in PubMed Central and indexed in PubMed. Please consider submitting your manuscripts for publication to our journal and check us out on-line!
