Advances in Ocular Surgery and Eyesight

Message from the Guest Editors

Ocular diseases are increasing in prevalence, with cases of age-related macular degeneration and glaucoma expected to double in the next 20 years. This Special Issue highlights groundbreaking surgical approaches, robotic-assisted surgeries, and refractive and cataract surgeries. Many surgeries target corneal and aqueous humor outflow structures for corneal and retinal disease. Novel pharmaceutical treatments and gene therapies are also being developed. The focus is on current and future methods of surgical, pharmaceutical, or genetic therapeutic intervention in the treatment of ocular disease.
