Evolution and Trends in Plastic and Reconstructive Facial Surgery

Message from the Guest Editor

Facial plastic and reconstructive surgery is multidisciplinary and is mainly driven by plastic surgeons; however, it includes dermatology, oral maxillofacial surgery, otolaryngology and ophthalmology. Additionally, it comprises theoretical and practical principles of both cosmetic/aesthetic and reconstructive surgery. The spectrum of practice for facial plastic surgery in the US includes cranio-maxillary trauma and reconstruction, surgical correction of congenital defects, rhinoplasty, browlifts, blepharoplasty, oncologic resection of cutaneous malignancies, gender-affirming surgery, and microvascular reconstruction of head and neck defects. Due to the wide possibilities, facial plastic surgery is continuously evolving, with constant innovative developments in cutting-edge supplementary technologies and new surgical techniques. With this Special Issue, we hope to encourage submissions that discuss the current state-of-the-art, address ongoing knowledge gaps, and focus on ongoing controversies related to evolution and trends in plastic and reconstructive facial surgery.
