

Special Issue

Endocrine Malignancies: Current Surgical Therapeutic Approaches: 2nd Edition

Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue encourages the submission of research articles which address how the pathophysiology of endocrine malignancy development drives both the current and novel emerging therapies that can be of benefit to patients, in addition to the refinement and advancement of surgical interventions. It is intended to present and discuss all the aspects of the currently available diagnostic and treatment methodologies, both surgical and non-surgical, of thyroid and adrenal malignancies via original research articles and reviews. For this Special Issue, we invite authors and researchers to publish original research and reviews highlighting the advancements in the diagnosis, prognosis, surgery, and therapeutics of endocrine malignancies, in particular, thyroid and adrenocortical cancer. Potential topics may include, but are not limited to:

- Thyroid cancer diagnosis and differentiation.
- Clinical management and surgical treatment of TC patients.
- Parathyroid pathologies: clinical and surgical management.
- Adrenocortical cancer diagnosis: genetic, clinical, and radiological findings.
- New pathways, targeted drugs, and immunotherapy for ACC patients.
