New Insight into Pain and Chronic Pain Management

Message from the Guest Editor

Pain is becoming an increasingly important issue in our society, especially as we enter an aging society. The appropriate management of chronic pain is becoming increasingly important in maintaining quality of life. Although new pain treatment techniques and discoveries on pain mechanisms are being made, limitations still exist, and appropriate pain management is still a difficult topic. We are looking for submissions on creative and novel ideas for pain management, from any department or specialty. We believe it is important to share and utilize ideas with each other, and through this, we hope to find opportunities to overcome the limitations of pain treatment that we are currently facing.
