

Special Issue

Targeted Diagnosis and Treatment of Coronary Artery Disease

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue aims to provide an overview of the latest discoveries and new findings, analyses of previously published data, and new opinions and perspectives on targeted diagnosis and treatment in coronary artery disease. Original research articles and reviews are welcome. Research areas of interest include (but are not limited to) the following: myocardial circulation and pathophysiologic changes during ischemia and after revascularization; percutaneous coronary intervention, with an emphasis on emerging techniques and technologies; coronary artery bypass graft, with an emphasis on functional-based revascularization or total arterial revascularization; intravascular ultrasound (IVUS); fractional flow reserve (FFR); instantaneous wave-free ratio (iFR); and angiogenesis following percutaneous or surgical revascularization.
