Urologic Neoplasms: Recent Advances and Future Perspectives

Message from the Guest Editor

Over the last decade, we have witnessed tremendous advancement in the field of urinary and male genital system neoplasms. On one hand, we have seen the introduction of new protocols for the treatment of malignancies, some of which recruit the patient's immune system to eradicate threats. On the other hand, robotic systems developed by various manufacturers have arrived on the market, facilitating precision in surgical maneuvers and, as a consequence, improving surgical and oncological outcomes. This Special Issue of Journal of Clinical Medicine will focus on advances in the surgical and medical treatment of various urological and male genital system neoplasms. Authors are welcome to submit original research and review articles on the medical and surgical treatment of urological neoplasms involving the prostate, kidney, ureter, urinary bladder, penis, and testes.
