Research and Applications in Clinical Pharmacy Based on Pharmacokinetics and Pharmacogenetics

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue on "Research and Applications in Clinical Pharmacy Based on Pharmacokinetics" emphasizes the essential role of pharmacokinetics in enhancing personalized medicine. It aims to present pioneering research and practical applications that help healthcare professionals tailor treatments to individual patients' needs. Key themes include pharmacokinetics modeling in drug management, drug monitoring trends, dosage adjustments, and insights into drug interactions. The issue also addresses challenges in applying pharmacokinetics research in clinical practice, focusing on optimal therapeutic efficacy and safety. Contributions will highlight insights into both established and emerging therapeutics, considering patient-specific factors. The goal is to enrich the understanding and application of pharmacokinetics, ultimately improving patient outcomes and fostering innovation in clinical pharmacy.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

There has been an explosion of gene and target based research and therapeutics in the multitude of fields that compose clinical medicine. The Journal of Clinical Medicine's (JCM) staff and editorial board are dedicated to providing cutting edge, timely, and peer-reviewed articles covering the diverse subspecialties of clinical medicine. The journal publishes concise, innovative, and exciting research articles as well as clinically significant articles and reviews that are pertinent to the myriad of disciplines within medicine. The articles published are relevant to both primary care physicians and specialists. The journal's full-texts are archived in PubMed Central and indexed in PubMed. Please consider submitting your manuscripts for publication to our journal and check us out on-line!
