Hot Topics in PRESBYOPIA 2021

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue on Hot Topics in Presbyopia Pathophysiology and Management is provoked by PRESBYOPIA 2020 Meeting (organized by Polish Presbyopia Club with International Society for Refractive Surgery (<http://konferencja2020.presbiopia21.pl/en/>)). The Journal of Clinical Medicine (JCM) provides an opportunity to publish the selected data on the most recent data on pathophysiology and management of presbyopia. As the world's population is aging, and there is a prediction that 21% of the world's population will be 60 years or older by 2050, presbyopia may become one of the most pressing visual concerns of the 21st century, with its global prevalence predicted to increase to 1.8 billion individuals by 2050. Contact lenses, eye glasses, refractive surgery and intraocular lens surgery are the main modalities in presbyopia treatment, although they all have some disadvantages. There were also several recent studies on the use of pharmacological agents in the presbyopia management. Thus, presbyopia management is certainly very important and innovative field with an increasing number of effective and safe approaches.
