Laparoscopic and Surgical Treatment for Colorectal Cancer

Message from the Guest Editor

Rectal cancer is one of the most common diagnosed tumors in the world. Surgery is still the cornerstone for its treatment. The controversy between laparoscopic and open approaches has transformed into debates over the best minimal invasive technique. Advances in preoperative evaluation and neoadjuvant treatment options increased the complexity of treatment possibilities. The present Special Issue aims to collect high-quality reviews, meta-analyses and systematic reviews, original articles, and communications on laparoscopic and surgical treatment for early and advanced rectal cancer. The Special Issue focuses on all aspects of operative and perioperative treatment modalities and decision making, including advanced new technologies for minimally invasive and organ-preserving surgery.
