Clinical Advances in Head and Neck Cancer Surgery

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue, "Clinical Advances in Head and Neck Cancer Surgery", highlights the latest developments in the field of head and neck cancer surgery. Surgical treatment is a common option for head and neck cancer. The extent of surgery depends on the stage and location of the cancer. The goal of surgery is to remove cancerous tissue alongside a margin of healthy tissue to reduce the risk of recurrence. Surgery may be performed alone or in combination with other treatments, such as radiation therapy or chemotherapy. In some cases, reconstructive surgery may be required to restore the function of the upper airway and digestive tract. This Special Issue features articles on various topics, including surgical techniques, outcomes, and advancements in technology, providing valuable insights into the challenges and opportunities in head and neck cancer surgery in addition to offering practical guidance for clinicians for improving the care of patients with this challenging disease.
