

Special Issue

Rare Respiratory Diseases: A Personal and a Public Health Problem: 3rd Edition

Message from the Guest Editor

About four years ago, we proposed to the Journal of Clinical Medicine editorial board to launch a Special Issue on rare respiratory diseases (RRDs) to promote research in this important field of medicine. Even in these times of the pandemic, researchers were very active, and the Special Issue was quite successful, with 26 articles submitted, of which 16 were published (61% acceptance rate) and 44.663 visits to the journal's web page (https://www.mdpi.com/journal/jcm/special\_issues/Rare\_Respiratory\_Diseases). The second Special Issue was also well received, with 16 articles submitted and 9 published (56% acceptance rate) and 24.000 accesses to the journal's web page (https://www.mdpi.com/journal/jcm/special\_issues/Rare\_Respiratory\_Diseases2). In view of the excellent results achieved from the first two Special Issues, we have decided to launch a third Special Issue on RRDs (Rare Respiratory Diseases: A Personal and a Public Health Problem: 3rd Edition)..... We hope that this new Special Issue will be of interest to you and will help promote research on RRDs. We look forward to receiving your basic, clinical, and social research papers.
