Advancements in Femtosecond Laser Applications

Message from the Guest Editors

We are excited to announce the launch of a new Special Issue titled "Advancements in Femtosecond Laser Applications". This Special Issue aims to explore the latest developments and research in femtosecond laser-assisted surgeries, particularly focusing on cataract surgery and corneal applications. The scope of this Special Issue includes, but is not limited to, the following:

- Cataract Surgery: Innovations and implications of emerging techniques in both conventional and femtosecond laser-assisted cataract surgery, with a focus on strategies to minimize intraoperative and postoperative complications and enhance long-term outcomes.
- Corneal Applications: Studies on femtosecond laser-assisted Corneal Allogenic Intrastromal Ring Segments (CAIRS) implantation for keratoconus, femtosecond laser-assisted deep anterior lamellar keratoplasty (DALK) and other types of corneal refractive surgery.

We encourage submissions that provide comprehensive reviews, original research articles and clinical studies. Our goal is to summon the ophthalmology community to contribute their findings and insights, fostering a collaborative environment to advance the field.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

There has been an explosion of gene and target based research and therapeutics in the multitude of fields that compose clinical medicine. The Journal of Clinical Medicine's (JCM) staff and editorial board are dedicated to providing cutting edge, timely, and peer-reviewed articles covering the diverse subspecialties of clinical medicine. The journal publishes concise, innovative, and exciting research articles as well as clinically significant articles and reviews that are pertinent to the myriad of disciplines within medicine. The articles published are relevant to both primary care physicians and specialists. The journal's full-texts are archived in PubMed Central and indexed in PubMed. Please consider submitting your manuscripts for publication to our journal and check us out on-line!
