Clinical Pharmacology: Adverse Drug Reactions

Message from the Guest Editors

The Journal of Clinical Medicine (JCM) is pleased to announce the launch of this Special Issue, entitled “Clinical Pharmacology: Adverse Drug Reactions”. This Special Issue aims to explore the latest advancements in understanding, detecting, and preventing adverse drug reactions (ADRs), a critical challenge in pharmacology and patient safety. The scope of this Special Issue includes, but is not limited to, pharmacovigilance, drug interactions, genetic predispositions, real-world evidence, and innovative strategies for ADR mitigation. We welcome studies utilizing clinical trials, observational studies, and advanced analytical methods to improve drug safety and therapeutic outcomes. Submissions focusing on the role of biomarkers in ADR prediction, personalized medicine approaches, and regulatory frameworks for drug safety monitoring are highly encouraged. Additionally, research on ADRs in special populations, such as pediatric, geriatric, and polypharmacy patients, is of particular interest.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

There has been an explosion of gene and target based research and therapeutics in the multitude of fields that compose clinical medicine. The Journal of Clinical Medicine's (JCM) staff and editorial board are dedicated to providing cutting edge, timely, and peer-reviewed articles covering the diverse subspecialties of clinical medicine. The journal publishes concise, innovative, and exciting research articles as well as clinically significant articles and reviews that are pertinent to the myriad of disciplines within medicine. The articles published are relevant to both primary care physicians and specialists. The journal's full-texts are archived in PubMed Central and indexed in PubMed. Please consider submitting your manuscripts for publication to our journal and check us out on-line!
