The Current Trend in the Management of Bruxism and Temporomandibular Disorders

Message from the Guest Editor

We are pleased to invite you to contribute to our upcoming Special Issue entitled "The Current Trend in the Management of Bruxism and Temporomandibular Disorders". This Special Issue aims to explore recent advancements and emerging trends in the management of bruxism and TMDs. It aligns closely with the scope of our journal, which focuses on dental and medical research aimed at improving patient care and outcomes. By compiling a comprehensive collection of articles, we seek to provide valuable insights and practical strategies to clinicians, researchers, and stakeholders in these fields. We aim to include a diverse range of contributions to ensure a robust and informative collection of articles, potentially culminating in a printed book form. We welcome original research articles and reviews covering various aspects of bruxism and TMD management. We encourage submissions that contribute to advancing our understanding and improving clinical practice in this important area of dental and medical research. Please click here for more information and submit your manuscript.
