Novel Diagnostic and Therapeutic Strategies in Vitreoretinal Disease

Message from the Guest Editors

The study of vitreoretinal diseases is advancing quickly thanks to new research and innovative clinical methods. This Special Issue of the Journal of Clinical Medicine intends to showcase the latest diagnostic and treatment strategies that are changing how we manage vitreoretinal disorders. A key focus of this issue is the development of advanced surgical and imaging techniques. Additionally, the issue explores new treatment approaches. From gene therapies targeting specific genetic problems to new drug treatments and less invasive surgeries, these strategies provide new hope for patients with conditions like age-related macular degeneration, diabetic retinopathy, and retinal detachment. This Special Issue not only highlights scientific advancements in vitreoretinal disease but also emphasizes the need to apply these discoveries in clinical practice. By encouraging collaboration between researchers and doctors, we aim to bridge the gap between research and patient care, ultimately improving outcomes and quality of life for patients.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

There has been an explosion of gene and target based research and therapeutics in the multitude of fields that compose clinical medicine. The Journal of Clinical Medicine's (JCM) staff and editorial board are dedicated to providing cutting edge, timely, and peer-reviewed articles covering the diverse subspecialties of clinical medicine. The journal publishes concise, innovative, and exciting research articles as well as clinically significant articles and reviews that are pertinent to the myriad of disciplines within medicine. The articles published are relevant to both primary care physicians and specialists. The journal's full-texts are archived in PubMed Central and indexed in PubMed. Please consider submitting your manuscripts for publication to our journal and check us out on-line!
