Neuropathic Pain: From Prevention to Diagnosis and Management

Message from the Guest Editor

Neuropathic pain remains a significant clinical challenge, affecting millions worldwide and often proving refractory to conventional treatments. This Special Issue aims to provide a comprehensive platform for cutting-edge research that advances our knowledge of neuropathic pain mechanisms, diagnostic strategies, and therapeutic interventions. We invite researchers, clinicians, and industry professionals to contribute original research articles, systematic reviews/meta-analyses, and translational studies that address key aspects of neuropathic pain. Topics of interest include, but are not limited to, novel pharmacological and non-pharmacological treatment approaches, biomarkers for early diagnosis and prognosis, neuroinflammatory and neuroimmune contributions to pain, and the role of genetic and epigenetic factors in pain susceptibility and treatment response. We look forward to your valuable contributions that will help shape the future of neuropathic pain research and management.
