

Special Issue

Treatment of Facial Fracture

Message from the Guest Editors

The failure to properly diagnose and treat traumatic injuries to the maxillofacial complex may result in devastating quality-of-life outcomes. With post-surgical consequences that range from malocclusion to loss of vision, the academic and surgical expertise of the facial trauma surgeon is essential for this patient population. The enhancement of technology developed from the collaboration of surgeons, research scientists, and engineers has allowed for precise diagnosis and surgical planning. The results provided by these scientific efforts not only improve surgical outcomes but also have a positive socioeconomic impact on the hospital systems, such as shorter operating room times and hospital stays. This Special Issue will present the current concepts in the diagnosis and management of traumatic injuries to the face that are fundamental to providers involved in the treatment of fractures of the craniofacial complex.
