

Special Issue

Pain and Rheumatology

Message from the Guest Editors

This “Special Issue” aims to provide an up-to-date overview of modern discoveries of the inflammatory processes linked to rheumatic diseases, from the molecular scale to the consequences of inflammation. It also hopes to reveal the genetic predispositions for a group of pathologies affecting a large part of the population. Correlations between rheumatic pathologies and other organs/systems (e.g., nervous, cardiovascular, renal, etc.) and their relationship to pain should be highlighted through reports on the last discoveries. The importance of rehabilitation and non-pharmacological treatments, as elucidated by relevant results from scientists around the world, should also be emphasized. This includes any potential interventional treatments for the management of pain in rheumatic diseases. Lastly, submissions should provide a modern vision of pharmacologic therapy, which remains a cornerstone for the wellbeing of the patients affected by rheumatic diseases.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

There has been an explosion of gene and target based research and therapeutics in the multitude of fields that compose clinical medicine. The Journal of Clinical Medicine's (JCM) staff and editorial board are dedicated to providing cutting edge, timely, and peer-reviewed articles covering the diverse subspecialties of clinical medicine. The journal publishes concise, innovative, and exciting research articles as well as clinically significant articles and reviews that are pertinent to the myriad of disciplines within medicine. The articles published are relevant to both primary care physicians and specialists. The journal's full-texts are archived in PubMed Central and indexed in PubMed. Please consider submitting your manuscripts for publication to our journal and check us out on-line!
