Advances and Updates in Hand Surgery

Message from the Guest Editors

Hand surgery contains a very broad spectrum of procedures and comprises complex subspecialties. We will present the latest advances in the dynamic field of hand surgery in which worldwide efforts are made around the world to treat traumatic injuries and degenerative conditions of the hand that continue to lead to significant impairment and disability. This Special Issue offers a space with which to explore innovative technologies applied to hand surgery. We invite contributions of the newest innovations available to hand surgeons and studies about the effect of new technologies on hand surgery in terms of diagnosis, prognosis, and therapeutic.
