Despite the advances in the diagnosis and treatment of pulmonary embolism and thrombosis that have been made over recent years, challenges remain in the management of PE and thrombosis. These include prevention, treatment, and management for patients with pulmonary embolism and thrombosis; continued research and innovation in this field will further enhance our understanding and management of these conditions, ultimately leading to better outcomes for patients. This Special Issue aims to report the latest research on pulmonary embolism and thrombosis. We would like to cordially invite you to submit your manuscripts for review and publication in the Journal of Clinical Medicine to improve clinical outcomes as well as ensure optimal short- and long-term management.
