New Advances in Dyslipidemia

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue will address newer concepts in the evaluation and management of dyslipidemia, including the rationale for newer goals in lipid treatment given recent international guidelines, global trends in the epidemiology of dyslipidemia, newer concepts and therapies in the evaluation and management of familial hypercholesterolemia, newer therapies for LDL-C lowering beyond statin therapy, the status of lipoprotein(a) as a causal risk factor and newer therapeutic approaches to address it, the evaluation and management of dyslipidemia in children, newer and emerging therapies for hypertriglyceridemia, and nutraceuticals to address dyslipidemia in COVID-19 patients. This Special Issue will discuss the latest clinical trials and other research developments regarding newer and emerging therapies for the management of dyslipidemia to reduce ASCVD residual risk. The hope is to provide clinicians with the latest information on key aspects of the evaluation and treatment of dyslipidemia. We are seeking papers on novel topics that help advance the evaluation and management of different aspects of dyslipidemia. Prof. Dr. Nathan D. Wong
