Clinical Frontiers in Autism Spectrum Disorder

Message from the Guest Editors

In 2022, we will be launching our first Special issue on “Clinical Frontiers in Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD)”. The goal is to provide both clinicians and researchers worldwide with cutting-edge research in ASD as well as clinical knowledge in assessing and caring for individuals with ASD across treatment settings. We welcome a wide range of manuscripts from expert clinicians and researchers on various topics, including but not limited to genetics, gender and equality, common medical and psychiatric co-occurring conditions, neuromodulation, management of severe behavior and mood dysregulation across various settings, employment and higher education, families and school, nonmedical intervention, substance use, and legal and government support. We welcome both solicited and unsolicited submissions that will contribute to this goal. We also welcome studies with negative studies, which is also one of the unique features of this journal.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

Journal of Clinical Medicine (ISSN 2077-0383) is an international, peer-reviewed, open access journal dedicated to advancing clinical and preclinical research. Our Editorial Board and staff are committed to delivering cutting-edge, timely, peer-reviewed articles spanning the diverse subspecialties of clinical medicine. The journal publishes concise, innovative, and impactful research articles, as well as reviews that are clinically significant and relevant to the full spectrum of medical disciplines. All full texts are archived in PubMed Central and indexed in SCIE (Web of Science), Scopus, PubMed, and other major databases. We invite you to submit your manuscript for publication, as well as join our community as a reviewer or reader online.
