

Special Issue

From "Stress Septal Sign" to Global "Heart Remodeling"

Message from the Guest Editors

Segmental analyses of geometric and functional cardiac tissue features could be beneficial for the early determination of cardiac diseases using novel cardiovascular imaging. The remodeling process has been found to be correlated with hemodynamic stress and microscopic details of remodeling, which has contributed to the documentation of the early and late phases of the remodeling process. Ultimate hypertensive heart disease phases have also been recently reported quantitatively.

This Special Issue aims to publish contributions from distinguished authors for original works and reviews (case reports and short reviews are not accepted).

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

There has been an explosion of gene and target based research and therapeutics in the multitude of fields that compose clinical medicine. The Journal of Clinical Medicine's (JCM) staff and editorial board are dedicated to providing cutting edge, timely, and peer-reviewed articles covering the diverse subspecialties of clinical medicine. The journal publishes concise, innovative, and exciting research articles as well as clinically significant articles and reviews that are pertinent to the myriad of disciplines within medicine. The articles published are relevant to both primary care physicians and specialists. The journal's full-texts are archived in PubMed Central and indexed in PubMed. Please consider submitting your manuscripts for publication to our journal and check us out on-line!
