Improved Rehabilitation for Patients with Chronic Pain

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue welcomes randomized controlled trials (RCT), cohort studies, and practice-based/real-world evidence/registry studies together with different types of systematic reviews. Possible areas include but are not restricted to:

- The best ways to assess patients prior to rehabilitation interventions;
- Rehabilitation interventions (including the Internet) at different levels of the health care system;
- How to optimize the content of rehabilitation in relation to the severity of the condition;
- How to optimize patient participation in rehabilitation;
- Systematic reviews, and reviews of reviews, of rehabilitation interventions;
- Methods to evaluate complex rehabilitation interventions;
- Predictions of rehabilitation outcomes;
- Mediators and moderators of outcomes in rehabilitation interventions;
- The biological and physiological effects;
- Health economics studies.
