

Special Issue

Translational Research in Aging, Geriatrics and Gerontology

Message from the Guest Editors

For this Special Issue on “Translational Research in Aging, Geriatrics, and Gerontology”, we are inviting a wide range of relevant research works spanning from basic sciences to population-level analyses, including original research papers, systematic reviews, and meta-analyses covering the following topics, among others:

- Inter-organ communication such as studies on the interactions between the microbiome and other organs in normal aging or aging-related conditions.
- Observational studies or clinical trials on the use of pharmacological, nutraceutical, lifestyle, or other interventions to slow the aging process or improve healthy aging and quality of life in older adults.
- Use of data science, artificial intelligence, and machine learning to generate new evidence in translational aging research.
- Health economic or policy evaluations regarding aging including the financing of healthcare systems, cost of medications, and cost-effectiveness of interventions to improve the aging process.

About the Journal

Message from the Editorial Board

There has been an explosion of gene and target based research and therapeutics in the multitude of fields that compose clinical medicine. The Journal of Clinical Medicine's (JCM) staff and editorial board are dedicated to providing cutting edge, timely, and peer-reviewed articles covering the diverse subspecialties of clinical medicine. The journal publishes concise, innovative, and exciting research articles as well as clinically significant articles and reviews that are pertinent to the myriad of disciplines within medicine. The articles published are relevant to both primary care physicians and specialists. The journal's full-texts are archived in PubMed Central and indexed in PubMed. Please consider submitting your manuscripts for publication to our journal and check us out on-line!
