Advances in Marine Natural Products

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue aims to bridge interdisciplinary gaps by showcasing innovative approaches in marine natural product research, from bioprospecting in underexplored habitats to advanced metabolomics and Al-driven drug discovery. We welcome original research, reviews, and perspectives that integrate marine chemistry, molecular ecology, and omics technologies with applied strategies for sustainable exploitation of marine resources. This Special Issue seeks to compile interdisciplinary research on the discovery, characterization, and application of marine-derived natural products. We aim to highlight advances in extraction technologies, ecological studies of marine biodiversity, and the integration of omics tools (genomics and metabolomics) to decode biosynthetic pathways. We invite original research, reviews, and perspectives on the following topics: Novel marine natural products with therapeutic or industrial applications.

Sustainable harvesting and cultivation techniques. Ecological and evolutionary insights into marine chemical ecology.

Advances in omics, synthetic biology, and computational modeling for marine biodiscovery.
