Coastal Fish Research II

Message from the Guest Editor

Coastal fish are important components of marine ecosystems. Furthermore, some species are the most important economic resources for the majority of professional and recreational fishing activities. On the other hand, other species represent serious threats for marine ecosystems, the economy and, in some cases, human health. These latter species are known as invasive alien species (IAS). The purpose of this Special Issue is to publish quality and impactful research articles with respect to several aspects of fish biology and ecology, also including commercial species, the impact of fishery on coastal fish communities, and biological invasion by non-indigenous fish species. Original and high-quality research directly related to the various aspects mentioned above is encouraged.

About the Journal

Message from the Editor-in-Chief

Journal of Marine Science and Engineering (JMSE, ISSN: 2077-1312) focuses on research in the fields of Ocean Engineering, Coastal Engineering, Physical Oceanography, Geological Oceanography, Marine Biology, and Marine Environmental Science. It publishes reviews, regular research papers, and short communications, as well as Special Issues on particular subjects. Our aim is to encourage scientists to publish their experimental and theoretical results in as much detail as possible. There is no restriction on the maximum length of the papers.

Editor-in-Chief

Author Benefits

High Visibility:

indexed with Scopus, SCIE (Web of Science), Ei Compendex, GeoRef, Inspec, AGRIS, and other databases.

Journal Rank:

JCR - Q2 (Engineering, Marine) / CiteScore - Q2 (Ocean Engineering)

Rapid Publication:

manuscripts are peer-reviewed and a first decision is provided to authors approximately 16.5 days after submission; acceptance to publication is undertaken in 2.5 days (median values for papers published in this journal in the second half of 2025).
