Chemical Oceanography Reviews

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue of Journal of Marine Science and Engineering (JMSE) aims to provide an open access forum for peer-reviewed review papers on current and emerging issues of interest in the field of chemical oceanography. Emphasis for this Special Issue will be placed on scholarly research that advances our knowledge and understanding of marine chemical processes, including acidification, biogeochemical and geochemical cycles, carbonate chemistry, chemistry of organic compounds, and organic and inorganic contaminants. We invite researchers and their colleagues to contribute review papers on the state of knowledge, new developments as well as recommendations for future research in aspects of marine chemistry, including impacts of climate change and increasing pollution problems in the global ocean. Types of articles considered (<https://www.mdpi.com/journal/jmse/instructions>) include reviews and systematic reviews, providing concise and precise updates on the latest progress made in their area of research.
