Special Issue

Trichoderma in Action

Message from the Guest Editors

Trichoderma is a cosmopolitan genus comprising species with great biotechnological impacts in the production of proteins, elicitors, bioactive molecules, and biocontrol, promoting plant growth and systemic resistance. In addition, it is used to understand many cellular processes. In this regard, the 16th International Trichoderma-Gliocladium Workshop (TG2024) was held at Lincoln University, New Zealand, under the theme "Trichoderma in Action". There were five sessions as follows:

- Ecology, biodiversity, and taxonomy.
- Biology-omics, physiology, and biotechnical applications.
- Interaction with other microbes and animals.
- Interaction with plants.
- Product development.

This Special Issue of the Journal of Fungi will include papers from these five sessions presented at TG2024.
