New Advances in the Prevention and Treatment of Neurological Diseases

Message from the Guest Editor

The aim of this Special Issue is to address the advances in the prevention and treatment of neurological diseases in the era of personalized medicine. In this context, the articles in this Special Issue should provide new perspectives on how we can optimize preventive and therapeutic strategies in patients with neurological diseases. We welcome clinical studies on stroke, movement disorders, dementia, epilepsy, demyelinating diseases, headaches, sleep disorders, infectious diseases of the nervous system and neuromuscular disorders. Works on the following topics are particularly welcome:

- Molecular and genetic mechanisms of neurological diseases;
- The use of technological devices in clinical neurology;
- Real-world evidence of currently available treatments for neurological diseases;
- Refining the clinical indication of pharmacological and non-pharmacological interventions in neurology;
- The biopsychosocial context in the prevention and treatment of neurological diseases;
- End-of-life care for people with neurological diseases.

We look forward to receiving your contribution.
