Special Issue

Breast Cancer: New Advances in Diagnosis and Personalized Therapies

Message from the Guest Editors

Against the rapidly evolving landscape of breast cancer research and clinical practice, staying abreast of cutting-edge advancements is essential. This Special Issue will provide a comprehensive and up-to-date overview of the latest innovations in breast cancer diagnosis and management, fostering interdisciplinary dialogue among researchers and clinicians. This Special Issue will provide an overview of the state of the art at this moment in time, with respect to innovations and achievements regarding diagnosis using various techniques (laboratory, genetics, imaging) in breast cancer and intermediate-grade pathology (B3), as well as medical, surgical, radiotherapeutic, and minimally invasive interventional therapies, with a focus on progress and the future and an emphasis on the rapid entry of artificial intelligence (AI) into this field. We welcome original research articles, reviews, and perspectives that will contribute to shaping the next era of breast cancer research.
