Personalized Medicine in Ophthalmology: Diagnosis, Prevention, and Treatment

Message from the Guest Editors

Ocular surface health is crucial for maintaining visual function and overall eye comfort, impacting millions around the world. Our evolving understanding of ocular surface interactions has led to new preventative, diagnostic, and therapeutic strategies that are transforming patient care. This Special Issue focuses on these advancements, emphasizing personalized approaches that enhance treatment efficacy and patient outcomes. We are particularly interested in featuring research that not only advances our diagnostic and preventive capabilities but also introduces innovative treatments, such as advanced scleral lens technologies tailored to specific patient needs. We invite you to submit your latest research, reviews, etc., that illuminate new understandings and methodologies in ophthalmology. Whether it involves groundbreaking treatments or in-depth analyses of molecular and clinical dynamics, your contributions will pave the way for future research in personalized ocular care.
