Neuroscience: Biomarkers and Personalized Medicine

Message from the Guest Editor

Giving the promising potential in neuroscience biomarkers and personalized medicine, the aim of this Special Issue is to improve the scientific evidence surrounding neurocognitive and psychiatric disorders to provide significant data for early diagnosis and effective treatment. We encourage authors to submit papers pertaining to neurodegenerative disorders, especially Alzheimer's disease. An area of special emphasis is the brain-behaviour relationship in aging science, too, with particular focus on cognitive and motor predictors of decline. Manuscripts reporting scientific efforts made to identify biomarkers for prevention, diagnosis, and drug and psychotherapy treatment response in psychiatric patients are also welcome.
