Personalized Cardiothoracic Surgery: Treatment and Management

Message from the Guest Editor

New technologies and medical developments have been taking traditional cardiothoracic surgery to more minimally invasive approaches and personalized treatments. This Special Issue aims to collect new evidence on innovations, integrated management, and therapeutic strategies that have been involving thoracic and cardiac surgery in the last few years. Original research articles and reviews are welcome. Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following:

- Updates and new developments in cardiothoracic surgery.
- Personalized medicine and innovations.
- Minimally invasive thoracic surgery (VATS and RATS).
- Mediastinal surgery.
- Oncological integrated strategies for treatment.
- New techniques for regional anesthesia in cardiothoracic surgery.

I look forward to receiving your contributions.
