Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to address the theoretical and empirical issues related to green and sustainable finance. Topics considered include, but are not limited to, innovative instruments to finance the energetic transition and green energy; innovations in private equity; green lending products; innovations in asset management (whatever the underlying assets); impacts of climate change and sustainable challenges on risk management and asset valuation; measuring the impact of ESG on portfolios; the design of common methods of impact measurement on firms and portfolio-level credit for sustainable projects, the relevance and governance of SRI labels; CSR and corporate governance; doing well by doing good, socially responsible banking, ethics in corporate finance and financial markets, and greenwashing and greenhushing.

Authors can also submit their papers to the special workshop that has been organized at the 4th Vietnam Symposium in Banking and Finance (24–26 October 2019, Hanoi, Vietnam). <https://vsbf2019.sciencesconf.org/>
