The recent experience with bouts of financial crisis and the ever-rising possibility of another (perhaps more severe) one demands that academics across the globe—importantly those working in the area of economics and finance—take a serious look at the trends in the financial market, both at the national and global levels. It is our role and responsibility to present emerging facts that might point to the turn of event in the market which may produce another crisis in the not-too-distant future! The toll it takes on individuals and the nation is enormous and so painful that we need to come forward and act from a professional standpoint sooner rather than later.

In light of this concern, we are publishing a Special Issue focusing primarily on a potential financial/economic crisis. Both theoretical and empirical papers are welcome.

Please consider submitting an article for publication in this journal, which strictly follows a double-blind review process to ensure quality. Please note that we are offering a very broad latitude for authors to accommodate papers from a wide array in the discipline. Should you have questions, please feel free to address them to me.
