Advanced Studies in Empirical Macroeconomics and Finance

Message from the Guest Editors

We are pleased to announce a call for papers for this Special Issue on 'Advanced Studies in Empirical Macroeconomics and Finance'. This Special Issue aims to collect a number of new contributions that will add to the growing literature on empirical macroeconomics and empirical finance. We welcome papers from all empirical research areas in macroeconomics and finance, particularly focusing on the following major areas: economic growth, debt, the financial market, green finance, energy finance, the effects of monetary and fiscal policies, macroeconomic forecasting, uncertainty, risk management, the housing market, and inequality.
