

Special Issue

Tourist Destination Management and Regional Economic Development

Message from the Guest Editor

Tourism is a very important and complex activity that is essential for the economic development of many regions. The common point of all tourism products is their organization around one or more tourist destinations, and these tourist destinations and their inhabitants are the recipients of the benefits and costs (economic, social, cultural and environmental) of the tourist activity. Therefore, the tourist destination is the basis and context of tourism, and it is essential that correct management can achieve sustainability with respect to economic, sociocultural and environmental sustainability. Potential topics for this Special Issue include but are not limited to the following:

- Residents' attitudes, their causes and consequences
- Tourism Area Life Cycle (TALC) and TALC application
- Analysis of the economic and social evolution of tourist regions
- Destination Management Organizations (DMO) and challenges of the XXI century
- Difficulties for the management of mature destinations
- Challenges for financing DMO actions
- Overtourism and tourism-phobia problems
- Crisis and resilience in tourist destinations
