

Special Issue

Corporate Governance in Emerging Markets

Message from the Guest Editors

This special issue examines corporate governance in emerging markets, focusing on how institutional, political, and economic contexts shape governance practices and firm outcomes. It solicits rigorous empirical and theoretical contributions that advance understanding of governance mechanisms, stakeholder interactions, and regulatory forces in economies undergoing rapid structural change. Topics of interest include board composition and effectiveness, ownership concentration and control, minority shareholder protection, state ownership and privatization, corporate political connections, governance and firm performance, cross-border listings, disclosure and transparency, governance during crises, ESG and sustainability practices, and the role of informal institutions and culture.
