The goal of this Special Issue is to examine how innovative technologies—like blockchain, big data, fintech, and artificial intelligence—intersect with sustainable finance approaches that tackle social inequality, environmental degradation, and climate risk. The Issue aims to provide innovative models and tools that support a more sustainable and inclusive economic future by emphasizing how innovation can improve financial decision-making, transparency, and impact measurement. The Special Issue will provide a timely platform for knowledge advancement, policy formation, and responsible innovation guidance in the dynamic field of sustainable finance by tackling these and related issues. We welcome interdisciplinary perspectives on strategic management, operations management, international business, and organizational behavior.
