Comovement of International Financial Markets II

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue focuses on the broad topic of “Comovement of International Financial Markets”, including novel research on the relationships between international financial markets. Contributions concerning all types of international financial markets, including international stocks, bonds, foreign exchange markets, and other financial markets, are encouraged. We also welcome papers on theoretical financial economics models, financial econometrics, or empirical assets that expand our understanding of the comovement and integration of international financial markets.
