

Special Issue

Managing Risk for Sustainable Development

Message from the Guest Editor

This Special Issue focuses on the broad topic of “Risk Management for Sustainable Development” and includes novel research on the theory and the modeling of risk management in the context of policies aiming to achieve economic development within the new paradigm of a sustainable bioeconomy. Theoretical and empirical articles that contribute to the issues within the broad field of risk mitigation and adaptation and focusing on the management of the bioeconomy and on the estimation, simulation, optimization, and calibration of related models are welcome. Contributions focusing on multivariate or high-dimensional applications in today’s complex world, novel measures of economic and financial risks, including risk externalities linked to the environment and the management of the bioeconomy, are encouraged.
