The Special Issue plans to give an overview of the most recent advances in the field of cities and planning, and identify emerging city patterns and models that allow mastering the transformation of cities driven by the twin digital and green transition as an opportunity for a radical change of city ecosystems, innovation leapfrogging, and system innovation.

Potential topics include, but are not limited to:

- new structures in cities under the impact of the twin transition:
- urban modeling using big data and real-time data; smart-green planning models for the 21st-century cities;
- city readiness for climate change; mobility-as-aservice and re-organization of the mobility ecosystem;
- planning for smart campuses;
- planning for net zero cities and districts;
- planning for vision zero to eliminate severe accidents:
- positive energy cities and districts;
- cyber-physical networks in urban innovation hubs.
