Message from the Guest Editors

Water from the sky, water from the ground: water has always been a fundamental resource of life and cities. For this Special Issue, we are interested in contributions that investigate and reflect the importance of water inside contemporary cities to face climate change through either empirical research or conceptual/theoretical works, examining any key processes. Contributions at the intersection of geography, political ecology, architecture, and urbanism are especially welcome, but contributions from other human–environment fields at the forefront of water and public space in the climate change context are also highly welcome. Regional and scalar diversity in contributions is also desired.

Deadline for manuscript submissions:

30 June 2022
