Message from the Guest Editors

This Special Issue aims to offer insight into the newest research on the contemporary landscape of cities. We would like to study changes in the image of urban spaces that occur due to social, environmental, and economic challenges. How do we manage to control these changes and what do we assume to be a success of such attempts? Does our perception of a city's aesthetics change together with trends of contemporary culture? What does “beautiful city” mean today? What has disappeared and what has emerged in the perspective view of a street?

Research areas may include (but are not limited to) the following:

- Evolving aesthetics of contemporary city;
- Perception of urban space among different groups of society;
- Investigation on changes of city's spatial structure;
- Influence of climate change, the pandemic, and other challenges on a city's structure development;
- New tendencies in urban design, composition, new aesthetic trends;
- New ideas on planning or legal regulations to shape the urban space;
- Experiments with new technologies in shaping the city's image;
- The role of different spatial elements;
- Virtual landscapes of the city.
