Message from the Guest Editor

Geoparks can therefore be treated as functional areas—spatial structures consisting of functionally related areas with uniform development goals.

This Special Issue welcomes papers focusing on topics including (but not limited to) the following:

- Development of geopark networks in individual countries;
- Assessment of the impact of geotourism on the use of landscapes;
- The role of spatial planning in geotourism;
- Good practices in geopark management;
- Problems of education in the field of geoheritage.
